Nestled in the heart of Virginia's famed Shenandoah Valley, historic Staunton is a revitalization success story. Its dynamic downtown features a special blend of small-town hospitality and big-city amenities. The city boasts nationally recognized performing arts venues, historic attractions and a lively grassroots music scene. Hundreds of restored Victorian-era buildings house an eclectic mix of independently owned shops and restaurants.

The National Trust for Historic Preservation touts Staunton's "dynamic downtown, cultural diversity, attractive architecture, and strong commitment to historic preservation and revitalization." The walkable city boasts six historic districts. Staunton is ideally located for quick and easy excursions to nearby areas that showcase the best of Virginia's natural resources and attractions, such as the Blue Ridge Parkway, Natural Bridge, and Civil War battlefields.

Staunton is one of the oldest cities west of the Blue Ridge Mountains. In 1732, Scots-Irish settler John Lewis and his family became the first Europeans to settle in the area, and a Courthouse for Augusta County was built here in 1745. Lots and streets were laid out in 1747 for the town of Staunton (pronounced STAN-ton), named after Lady Rebecca Staunton, the wife of Colonial Governor William Gooch. Strategically located at the intersection of the Great Wagon Road and early roads to the west, Staunton developed as a major center for trade. This was greatly enhanced with the arrival in 1854 of the Virginia Central Railroad. This railroad would later play a key role during the Civil War when the Shenandoah Valley served as the "Breadbasket of the Confederacy." Because Staunton remained largely unscathed during the Civil War, it retains one of Virginia's finest collections of authentic 19th century architecture.

historic sites

Civil War Era in Staunton

Staunton played a pivotal role during the Civil War years when the Shenandoah Valley served as the "Breadbasket of the Confederacy." While most of the battles were being fought north or west of the town, it was the presence of the Virginia Central Railroad that provided a vital link between the Valley and eastern Virginia, making Staunton an important supply depot for the Confederacy. Staunton has one architectural advantage over most of other small towns in the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia: it escaped the Civil War unscathed. Many of its 18th and early 19th century homes and buildings still stand and are wonderfully preserved.

Betsy Bell Wilderness Park

This park offers a magnificent view of the Shenandoah Valley from its observation platform (elev. 1,959 feet), which looks due east toward the Blue Ridge Mountains. The summit has picnic facilities and an observation area. The park may be reached by turning onto Betsy Bell Road from Greenville Avenue (Route 11). Mountain bikers may wish to test their endurance by tackling the entire length of the access road. It offers a difficult climb, a breathtaking view, and an exciting downhill run. Hikers will find a welcome natural area to explore and may catch a glimpse of the deer herd which haunts the slopes.

Blue Ridge Parkway

Outstanding scenery and recreational opportunities make the Blue Ridge Parkway one of the most popular components of the National Park System. "America's Favorite Drive" winds its way 469 miles through mountain meadows and past seemingly endless vistas. Split-rail fences, old farmsteads and historic structures complement spectacular views of distant mountains and neighboring valleys.

The trail provides views of the falls from overlooks constructed to accent the beauty of the valley. The first overlook is just 700 feet from the lower parking lot, making it an excellent stopover for travelers. The more adventuresome hiker may continue to Crabtree Meadows where the trail ends, or to the Appalachian Trail, which is just one half mile beyond Crabtree Meadows.

George Washington and Jefferson National Forest

These two national forests stretch from one end of Virginia to the other, as well as extending into West Virginia, along the ruggedly beautiful Appalachians. Virtually every type of outdoor recreation activity you can imagine is available. Of course hiking, fishing, mountain bicycling and camping lead the way, but don't forget hawk watching, cross-country skiing, horseback riding, nature photography, and orienteering. www.fs.fed.us

Ramsey's Draft Wilderness

Deerfield Ranger District

540-885-8028, www.fs.fed.us

Ramsey's Draft Wilderness is a rugged and steep piece of land on the eastern side of Shenandoah Mountain, a region redolent with memories of America's Civil War. One of the largest tracts of virgin forest left in the eastern United States has been preserved here. Among the variety of plants you may see are some virgin hardwoods and hemlocks standing in the upper elevations and a more typical Appalachian forest of tulip poplar, red oak, and basswood. Watch for deer and the many smaller mammals that inhabit the woods of Virginia.

Shenandoah National Park

Skyline Drive

Skyline Drive, the only public road through Shenandoah National Park, rides the crest of the Blue Ridge Mountains for 105 miles through the park, then joins the Blue Ridge Parkway which connects Shenandoah to Great Smoky Mountains National Park, NC.

St. Mary's Wilderness

Glenwood & Pedlar Ranger District

Steeles Tavern, VA 24476

www.fs.fed.us

The U.S. Congress designated the Saint Mary's Wilderness in 1984 and it now has a total of 9,835 acres. The largest Virginia Wilderness on national forest land, it is located in the Blue Ridge Mountain Range. It has elevations ranging from 1,700 feet to 3,400 feet, and includes 17 miles of trails. Along the Saint Mary's you can fish for native trout, walk through rhododendron and mountain laurel, and discover a lovely waterfall. The area was mined for iron ore and manganese until the mid-1900s, and evidence of those bygone days remains along the Saint Mary's River Gorge.

Plan for a leisurely shopping excursion downtown, which is lined with hundreds of Victorian buildings. Appealing storefronts house specialty shops, bookstores, art galleries, restaurants and performance venues. Almost all the stores in downtown are independently owned. Gift shops, home accessory stores and art galleries form the backbone of downtown, while antique stores, specialty food shops and clothing boutiques offer fabulous finds. Downtown also offers wellness options like salons, spas and yoga studios as well as more traditional offerings like outdoor outfitters and bike shops.

Children will delight in some of the region's finest toy and hobby shops, especially if you cap off their shopping adventure with a treat from a homemade ice cream shop. Parents can recharge with an espresso from any of our corner coffee shops. Downtown parking is readily available with a mix of street, garage and surface parking lots. For those exploring outside the historic district, the city offers a myriad of larger retailers to meet all your shopping needs.

Staunton's restaurant scene is lively with an eclectic vibe. All kinds of dining establishments co-exist cheerfully, from authentic Americana to haute cuisine. Epicureans will enjoy innovative, award-winning chefs and excellent wine lists. Locovores will delight in the city's burgeoning farm to table movement, fueled by the region's rich agricultural heritage and the seasonal Farmer's Market. Whether it is southern-style comfort food, delicious ribs, or even artisanal pizza – you'll find it in Staunton. If you are looking for something casual, turn to bakeries and coffee shops that serve up fresh soup and sandwiches, or visit one of the local lunch spots (make sure you ask about the daily special.) Don't leave town without treating yourself to a delectable confection from one of our bakers, perhaps accompanied by cup of freshly roasted local coffee.

Chef demonstrations, cooking classes, and farm tours with local producers are putting Staunton on the culinary tourism map. Adding to the excitement is Virginia's newest wine trail, the Shenandoah Valley Wine Trail, which is emerging all around the city.
